for forthright action by Canadians' to encourage national unity, Governor-General Vanier very significantly referred to one way in which this goal might be brought

This is a means to better eastwest understanding in this country which The Victoria Daily Times has urged on several occasions. Some countries encourage visits by persons from abroad, either through subsidies or in other ways, with a view to informing foreigners about the culture, products, education, entertainments and other pursuits of their hosts. Above all, it is sought to have foreign observers make acquaintance with the people of the country, see their good points and generate a friendly relationship with

IN HIS RECENT MOVING PLEA much of the conflict between French and English Canada, between the Maritimes and central areas, between the Pacific coast province and its highly industrialized eastern sister provinces, between prairie farmland and the factory districts of Ontario, between urban and rural folk-so many of the frictions that hamper our nation are caused by misunderstandings arising from ignorance of each other.

Mass exchanges between the provinces would be a powerful antidote to ignorance and misunderstanding. There are many ways in which these might be arrangedalready tentative steps are being taken in this direction through student exchanges, official tours and similar intercommunciation. But it must be done on a much larger

It would be money well spent if all levels of government co-operated with private interests to promote an active program of inter-provincial travel-a "get to know Canada and Canadians" plan that would remove This is exactly what Canada, on many of the barriers between people an intra-mural basis, needs today. arrangement, it becomes little better than a fence around three sides of a four-sided area. Russia is not bound by its terms and can make serious inroads into fisheries which North Americans consider their own preserves.

The point is made that the Russians are not fishing for salmon, the main haul of Canadians and Americans in these waters. But there is nothing to stop the Soviet fishermen from taking this species if they wish, provided they stay outside territorial limits. In negotiations for the renewal of the North Pacific treaty, North Americans have been pressing Japan again to accept the abstention principle by which nationals of that country do not fish salmon east of the 175th meridian. When the Rus-

Up to the present the importance If it remains only a three-nation of persuading Japan to honor the abstention principle has rested on a practical consideration. No major invasion of foreign fishermen other than Japanese has threatened the area the North Americans seek to protect. That practical consideration disappears when relative newcomers arrive.

> This year it is the Russians, presumably dragging for bottom fish, but in a position to harvest salmon if they so decide. Next year it might be one of the major South American fishing nations. In time to come it might be the Red Chinese.

> This is bad news to Canadian and American fishermen, but itappears to be a fact of life.

If the situation stresses one point, it seems to be that fishermen of all nations must combine to foster conservation. All of them suffer if lack of restriction destroys the the abstention principle applied to stocks on which fishermen depend.

The Viet Cong, Too, Are Mortal

THE central difficulty for the South Vietnamese as they face perhaps the most crucial months of the sayage war in their country, is that the Viet Cong have started an all-out summer campaign with the initiative firmly on their side. A well-armed, well-trained guerrilla force of 150,000 men has carefully studied and selected its objectives and can now move into the assault in its own time. The South Vietnamese and the Americans cannot be sure when or where the Viet Cong will strike because of a serious lack of "intelligence." They can only react on a moment-to-moment basis as the Viet Cong call the tune.

The biggest Viet Cong build-up has been in the North and Central Provinces. The country is ideal for guerrilla opera-tions. It is mountainous and densely forested - thousands of men can move about under a jungle umbrella imper vious to air reconnaissance. It stretches from the Laotian and Cambodian borders almost to the sea. Here the Viet Cong lines of communications with North Viet Nam are shortest; and the government lifelines at their most tenuous.

Control Countryside

The Viet Cong now control most of the countryside and so far they have made full use of their mobility in a series of highly successful ambushes round South Vietnamese military enclaves and on the highways. The South Vietnamese regular forces have been quite unable to cope with guerrilla ambush techniques. They have lost hundreds of men in the last two weeks and have been saved from total disaster only by American air strikes. Not unnaturally the South Vietnamese troops — in the central highlands — seldom nture outside their strongpoints at all. And this is no way to win a guerrilla At best the South Vietnamese, with American support, may hang on to the enclaves they now hold. But by now the Viet Cong are thought to be ready to move into another phase of the war and try to overrun military fortresses and towns. No one can tell if they will succeed until they make the attempt. Yet for for optimism as well as pessimism.

heavy casualties, Later 200 Viet Cong makeshift grave; others festooned the camp's barbed wire defences. This setback, and there have been one or two others like it, may give the Viet Cong pause. What it is equally likely to do is to convince them that they must attack only in overwhelming strength when the clouds of the present rainy season make American air strikes hazardous.

Prospective Objective

The communications and control base at Pleiku is thought to be one of the Viet Cong's major objectives this sum mer. It has just been reinforced by South etnamese troops, But its exposed situation is alarming, as I have seen. Pleiku lies in a plain cupped in jungle covered hills, Communications centre, strip, barracks and headquarters are dispersed in a straggling compound. Its road link with the outside world is vulnerable, winding Highway 19, that runs eastwards through the hills to the sea. It has been cut by the Viet Cong on innumerable occasions and could be cut again at any time, as officers at Pleiku admit. A few mortar bombs on the metal airstrip could prevent aircraft landing or leaving; a Viet Cong attack in February put it out of action for two weeks.

When I was there American C123 transports were still flying in but low cloud was seriously hampering propeller-driven aircraft (jets cannot use Pleiku airfield in any case) in support missions to the surrounding countryside.

In the last 10 days Viet Cong have become intensely active in the Pleiku area. South Vietnamese have been badly mauled in ambushes they seem to be unable to avoid. Patrols and air strikes into the jungle may have done something to keep the Viet Cong on the move and disrupt their preparations, but no one knows what effect they have. Meanwhile the garrison of Pleiku waits for the Viet Cong to attack in their own good time. The hope is that when they come ground fire-power will inflict such losses that the Viet Cong will abandon thoughts of seizing any more strongpoints and towns. But this is a depressingly nega-

Not Mountain Fighters

One government disadvantage is that the South Vietnamese plain take easily to mountain and jungle warfare. I was told that it takes from two to three years to accustom them to the hardly surprising when it is often so dense that the average rate of movement through it, for regular troops, is a mere three-quarters of mile an hour. Another is that the Viet Cong battalions are now disciplined troops. They have been completely reequipped with Soviet and Chinese arms and have quantities of heavy mortars, recoilless rifles and anti-tank weapons quite apart from anything they have captured from the South Vietnamese. Their communications are good and they have an elaborate signals system.

Recently Viet Cong tactics seem to have been aimed at seeking out and killing as many South Vietnamese soldiers as possible in an effort to demoralise the rest.

A feature of the Vietnamese war is the willingness of the army to keep plodding into battle. Even if some Vietnamese officers — but certainly not all - are unimaginative and infuriate their American advisers by Ignoring good counsel, the Vietnamese soldiers are a brave bunch. They have been heartened by the increasing American support, and have been saved, time and again, by swift and massive airlifts of troops in American helicopters, The arrival of U.S. marines and para troopers to guard bases like Danang and Bien Hoa has released much needed South Vietnamese troops for combat. The time now seems to be near when American troops will be committed into Vietnamese and Americans are mutually dependent, The Vietnamese army could hardly operate without American air support; but the Americans would find it extremely difficult to conduct the war on their own if Vietnamese army morale cracked. If, however, the Vietnamese can hold on to what they have, and in defending it inflict really heavy casualties on the Viet Cong, it may turn out, as some believe in Saigon, that Viet Cong morale is as vulnerable as anyone else's.

Mr. Bennett's Kingdom

The Albertan (Calgary)

MR. PAUL GERIN-LAJOIE, Quebec's education minister, had better nove over to make room on his provincial treaty rights platform for Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia, Indeed, we are not sure that Mr. Gerin-Lajoie should not take a back seat. He simply argues that a province has the constitutional right to make agreements with foreign countries on matters coming within provincial jurisdiction under the BNA Act. But Mr. Bennett, fresh from an exhilarating two weeks in Japan, claims for the provinces the right to make trade treaties with foreign countries. And trade is a federal responsibility.

True, Mr. Bennett does not contend that a province can negotiate treaties on all aspects of trade. He merely says that since natural resources come under provincial jurisdiction, only the provincial governments have the right to bargain with foreign countries on trade matters concerning natural resources. But that is quite enough to put Mr. Gerin-Lajoie to shame. For most of Canada's exports are either natural resources in their raw state or are derived from natural resources.

It may be, of course, that we are in terpreting Mr. Bennett too broadly. He is not the man to make a precise statement when an ambiguous one will do. Hence, if he were pinned down he might admit that he was simply claiming an exclusive provincial right to negotiate re garding the sale to or exploitation by foreign countries of such resources as water power or unprocessed minerals. Even so, he is claiming a good deal more than he is entitled to claim, and more than Ottawa can concede without abdicating one of the most important of its own constitutional responsibilities.

To be sure, there is no reason why a provincial government should not netiate with a foreign country, or with foreign industrial concerns, to obtain the best deal it can for the disposition of a natural resource. But any such arrangement it makes must be in conformity with national policy, as laid down by the federal government. Would Mr. Bennett argue, for instance, that Ontario should have the right to sell uranium from Elliot Lake for use in making nuclear weapons, in defiance of the recently ulgated federal restriction?

In giving Ottawa jurisdiction over foreign trade, the BNA Act is only hewing to common sense—for no nation can have 10 different trading policies. Where federal trade policy affects the disposition of provincial natural resources, conould be and usually can beavoided through the exercise of what Prime Minister Pearson calls co-opera-tive federalism. Is Mr. Bennett prepared to co-operate, or is he too interest-ed in establishing his own private kingdom west of the Rockies?

By JAMES H. GRAY

The Insecticide War

S THE first scattered reports come in from the western front in the war between ecology and insecticides, the news is inconclusive, but not good. The conflict arose out of the publication, by the late Rachel Carson, of the book Silent Spring, in which she document-ed the hazards to human health and bird and animal life by indiscriminate use of modern insecticides. The token concession

Gray the Carson and other indictments, which the industry launched last year, seems to have petered out.

It was a crusade to get the public to read the labels on the poisons they were using. This year the labels are still as near-unreadable as ever and the familiar missing from almost all the insecticides.

In Calgary, a little girl lost her life from the poison, arsenic, is a weed-killer her father was using. It was not labelled 'poison." Dr. Irial Grogan, medical superintendent of Holy Cross Hospital in Calgary recently reported the death of the child. He did so in a speech to the the child. He did so in a speech to the Alberta Coroners' convention when he argued for bigger and better inquests to alert the public to poison dangers.

Dr. Kenneth Thornton, a Medicine Hat pathologist, said that toxicological servces in Alberta were so bad that the chances of a poisoner getting away with murder were "staggeringly good." The poisonous weed killer is still on sale in Alberta because, as the chief coroner pointed out, it was packed outside Alberta and labelling is a federal responsibility.

In addition to poisonous weed killers. almost all the potentially poisonous-chlorinated hydro-carbons still are being sold without poison labels. One insecticide from British Columbia, which contains aldrin, is labelled poison. On several others, packaged by the same company, domesticated animals can be harmed. Most of the labels contain warnings against implied health hazards from the against implied health hazards from the use of insecticides. But these are "shouted" in agate type no larger than the fine print used for the directions. Some of the insecticides recommended for use of livestock contain warnings against using within 30 days of marketing the animal.

In British Columbia, two large cattle feeding stations were ordered to stop marketing meat and milk because of the dangerous level of pesticides in the flesh of the animals. They were being fed on potatoes which had been sprayed with dieldrin. Because of the proven long term damage which this chemical can do to the liver and kidneys, dieldrin has been banned completely in Manitoba. But it is still being sold and recommended for agricultural use in Saskatchewan and

One of the problems, indeed, in bringing insecticides under control is opposition by the agricultural scientists. in British Columbia, when the food and drug inspector shut down the cattle feeders, Fraser Carmichael, federal district agriculturalist, rushed to the defence of the feeders.

Mr. Carmichael's attitude was typical of that of most agriculturalists and

End of Illusion

Until recently, it was widely assumed that there was little danger in weed killers. The death of the Calgary child has abruptly put an end to that illusion. The use of arsenicals is not confined to weed killers, however. One preparation for killing slugs in lawns contains lethal quantities of arsenic. As with insecticides, the grass and weed killers are becoming increasingly potent as new formulations come on the market.

Professor R. S. Miller of the biology department of the University of Saskatchewan recently said biologists who know the hazards of insecticides are finding it difficult to combat the influence of the chemical industry. He accused it of taking "the fantastic position that 'we are right until you prove us wrong'

There are, however, a few spots. The city of Calgary has abandoned the use of D-D-T completely and in Regina, the parks department has also taken cognizance of the harm to birds by D-D-T.

In Edmonton and Winnipeg, unhappily, the anti-mosquito campaigners are still fogging up the countryside with D-D-T

In the Okanagan Valley, some scientists are beginning to wonder whether it is not about time to start over from the beginning. Since the use of D-D-T was started after the war, no less than seven separate insecticides have been used and discarded by the pear growers of the valley. New resistant strains of bugs have been developing almost as quickly as insecticides, and for the bugs there is no end in sight.

But for the birds, the end is already in sight in Calgary at least. The hundreds of swallows, which once convoyed the early morning traffic along Twelfth Avenue never came back this year. The killdeer are all gone from our pasture, the meadow larks and flickers are exceedingly scarce and the robins are reduced to a corporal's guard. Only the sparrows are to be heard in Central

Disillusionment Grows

OTTAWA - Disillusionment with President Johnson's strategy for blocking Communism in Viet Nam and Santo Domingo is becoming, evident in Ottawa, and may presage a more independent Canadian attitude than has thus far been expected. far been shown.

The history of this disillusionment goes back at least to the Camp David meeting between President Johnson and Prime Minister Pearson on April 3. The two leaders had a heated argument, with Johnson angrily rejecting Pearson's unasked advice to suspend bombing of North Viet Nam at an appropriate time, to see if Hanoi would respond with peace feelers. Was Johnson's vehemence that of a man deeply unsure of himself? Because me month later, between May 13 and 17, the Americans surreptitiously grounded their bomb ers. They never admitted it was a deliberate pause. For the first two days U.S. military en blamed bad weather.

By his refusal to advertise the pause as an olive branch, obviously for fear of losing face at home and abroad, Johnson minimized the chance of the ploy succeeding. And when Hanol cold-shouldered the pause that never was, Washington's attitude became one of "See, we told you it wouldn't work."

Nevertheless, Ottawa apparently acted on own when External Affairs Minister Martin instructed our truce commissioner in Viet Nam, J. Blair Seaborn, to seek a first-hand reaction from Hanoi. This Seaborn did on May 31, and it was negative.

Canada's position, Martin told the Com-ns' external affairs committee last week, Is that "a military solution in Viet Nam is neither desirable nor possible. We must seek a diplomatic solution.

Martin has often expressed Canada's support for the U.S. presence in Viet Nam, on th grounds that Communist aggression must be stopped lest it engulf all of Southeast Asia, and that the Communists must be taught that aggression does not pay. But there is increasing reason to believe that defence of U.S. policies and strategic decisions is weakening'in direct ratio to the increased danger of U.S. involve ment in war with China and the risk of nuclear world conflict.

Canadian misgivings undoubtedly underlay what Mr. Pearson had to say to Indian Prime Minister Shastri here last week. Indeed, their talks may be the basis for a common Indo-Canadian position at the Commonwealth conference in London this week that would evidence a hardening of Canadian opposition to any further escalation in Viet Nam, Confidence in U.S. policies is substantially a matter of confidence in President Johnson's judgment and control under the terrific pressures at the epicentre of conflict between the ident's military and diplomatic advisers. On this score Ottawa is not at ease.

Apprehensions about Viet Nam have been mounded by the Americans' record in Santo Domingo and, so far as the Canadian government is concerned—and over this it is supremely concerned—by the president's state-ment that the U.S. will not permit Communist governments in the western hemisphere.

As Ottawa thought at the time of the Cuban crisis, and is thinking now again, could this statement and action serve as a precedent for some future president to tell Canada the kind of government we may or may not have? The ought is more than a little disquieting

How to Lose Serenity

WE had come out onto the lawn for a quiet after-dinner cigarette on one of those too infrequent June evenings when the sun retains just enough of its strength.

A warm land breeze from the north wrinkled the Strait at the mouth of the bay and the shouts of chitdren on the beach had sunk a low murmur. It was a time for repose and silent

So instead of silence I conversation. "I'd better put new legs on this Cape Cod chair, told Pat. "The wet grass has rotted the bottoms of them.'

"So you have been saying for the last couple of years," she replied, trying to restore the untroubled, unthinking quiet. "I'll find some cedar. Lasts longer," I

"I've heard that before," she added, and we fell silent, but only for a short time.
"You know," she commented, "this lawn

I agreed but drew her attention to a new lawn philosophy we have adopted.

'Aren't we converting more and more of the garden into grass, year by year, to avoid the demands of the borders and flower beds?' I asked. "Do you realize that you can becon a member of a lawn cult and the grass will be as demanding as the flower beds? don't we wait a couple more years and then the creeping Charlie will have outgrown the grass and we'll have nice little blue flowers all over the place—a sort of topping of azure. We're going to get it anyhow."

"That's not the point," she argued, "A lawn's supposed to be a lawn, not a patchy field.'

"Sure," I said. "And as the old story goes the beautiful lawns of England depend on a few very simple rules. You plan and prepare carefully in the first place, then you weed, cut and roll them for two centuries and they come up fine. Do you think that for my next 145 years I ought to be down on my kneed digging out creeping Charlie, couch grass, dandelions and plaintain? Then rolling, cutting and trimming the edges? That's not much of a future for me."

"No, not that," agreed Patsy." But I was reading a piece in the Monitor the other day about how they keep the Centre Court and No. 1 Court at Wimbledon. You were there in 1933, remember?'

"Yes," I said, "but I didn't get down to the turf itself. I was watching Helen Jacobs beat Kay Stammers, and Kay Stammers was a

To a Londoner, a Common wealth conference is something that comes round every so often, like a flag day. He could not easily explain to a man from Mars, or even to himself, why this odd gather-ing should recur year after year. Why should it, indeed?

Twenty-one today, the Commonwealth prime ministers club membership is now too large for the old intimate atmosphere to prevail. Dr. Borg Olivier and Dr. Banda, Presidents Ayub Khan and Nyerere, Mr. Holyoake and Mr. Wilson can hardly establish any real rapport, even when weekend-ing at Chequers.

At Loggerheads

Many different things are on the various visitors' minds. India and Pakistan are now at loggerheads over the Rann of Kutch as well as Kashmir. Ghana and Nigeria have been exchanging angry words; so have Kenya and Uganda; Tanzania and Zambia are harboring Malawi's proscribed oppo sition leaders. Australia and New Zealand have committed troops to South Vietnam; Tanzania on Tuesday joined China in calling for the withdrawal such "imperialist" Also last Tuesday, the all forces. first prime minister to reach London, Sir Albert Margai of Sierra Leone, at once revealed that this conference will be marked as strongly as last year's by African impatience ith Britain's policy on Rho

But if practically everybody seems to want a conference, this does not necessarily mean that there is any strong desire this time to tighten the Commonwealth bond. Q. But I can't choose when I rake. Maybe it's wet, maybe it isn't, but there comes this weekend when I have this chance to rush at the Matto Grosso, as my vegetable bed is known. I want to get the whole thing finished, raking and shove the stuff in. Al-ready other people's peas are above the ground, the seed po-tatoes in my shed are putting out those awful underworldly white feelers, like the ghosts of octopuses. The day chooses me, not the other way round. But to get back to this Whatever length of rake I use it doesn't help with the basic problem, which is the rocksam and rootsam.

Over 65 and want more out of life? Investigate an Annuity.

Life on "just enough" income can be a frustrating and dull existence. Yet it's the life led by many people to-day who live on a limited pension. Extra money from interest and dividends on their few investments can help. But in many cases it's still not enough to really enjoy life. Selling investments for cash is a temporary solution but in the long run it means less income and more money worries.

The answer is an annuity. It scientifically combines interest and capital to provide a guaranteed income for life. It banishes stock market worries. Gives peace of mind. How much income an annuity will provide depends on many factors. Your age, for example, and the kind of annuity you buy. One popular type would give a man age 70 who deposits $10,000, an income of $1,248 a year as long as he lives. For information on an annuity to fit your needs just call the Manufacturers Life representative.

Iron and steel in B.C.a fifty year dream come true

Fifty years of debate and speculation about an integrated iron and steel industry for British Columbia ended last fall when a complete mine-toconsumer steel complex became a reality. It has not yet celebrated its first industrial birthday, but already it is showing important growth.

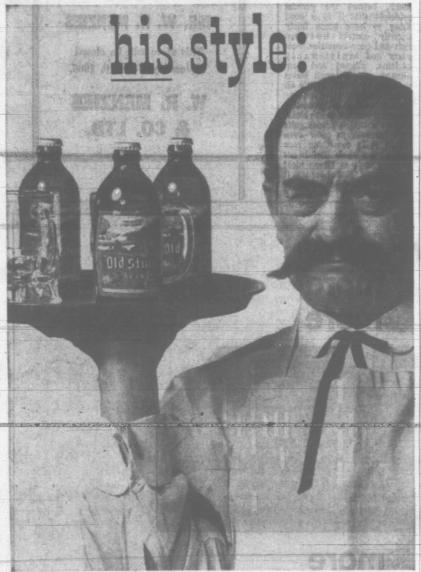

Integrated iron and steel in B.C. became possible by the joining of two companies, Western Canada Steel Limited of Vancouver - which pioneered the steel industry in the province, and Cominco - the miningmetallurgical-chemical complex which first produced primary iron in the West. The resulting combination of facilities, experience and technology, with the backing of great resources in raw materials, world-wide marketing, research, and corporate strength, has founded an industry of assured

The $40 million investment, the 200,000 tons of annual production and the year-round employment for over 700 British Columbians is only a start. The new industry is grawing now, and it is ready for unlimited further expansion to meet the bright prospects of the future.

Fifth Straight Defeat Magnifies Rocks' Woes

DOUG PEDEN. Sports Editor

There had been several attempts to reach Billy Foster on the phone since it had been reported that he had landed in Victoria, along with other summer

Mr. Foster lives at 274 Regina, about three Rolls-Royce from Hampton School, when he isn't chauffeuring automobiles at Phoenix or Trenton or Indianapolis.

When the phone rang in the Foster residence Monday morning, the better-looking half of the Foster entry answered. "Has anyone seen Billy Foster?"

"I have," Beverly Foster said. "Just a minute."

A sleepy "Hello" was heard.

"Sorry to awaken you so early," Foster was told. "I forgot the rich don't stir until noon."
"So who's rich?" Billy asked. "As a matter of fact, I was

"You're harder to catch than a pretty girl at a picnic."
"You're harder to catch than a pretty girl at a picnic."
"You're harder to catch than a pretty girl at a picnic." "Been in Edmonton," Foster said. "They asked m drive the pace car for a race up there. And to go on the m phone circuit. Since Indy, I feel I've seen every kind of mike and TV camera made."

King Went 96 Hours Without Sleep

Foster has been paying the price of having interviewers shove electronic gadgets in his kisser ever since he became the first Canadian to qualify and run in the Indy 500, auto racing's equivalent to the Christians wrestling with the lions.

He finished 17th at Indy, watching the last 110 laps with 250,000 other pagans, after his Rolla Vollstedt rear-engine Offenhauser slipped a vertebrae or something. Offenhausers, like some people, don't travel far on water.

"Tensioh? No, disgust mostly," he said in answer to a question about his pre-Indy disposition.

"We were the first car ready and then things started to go ng. Little things. I'm as much to blame as anybody. We'd have a problem and work around it. The next day the problem was still there. The last two days before the race you shouldn't be doing anything but last-minute checks. We were still rebuilding.

Grant (King, a former Victorian and his pit chief) worked a dog. Went four days and nights without sleep one tch. But the car wasn't just right.

"I had hoped for fifth or better. There was no way I could beat Clark, Foyt, Andreotti, Jones or Gurney-if they kept running. They had faster cars. But we couldn't keep running.

Fraction of Seconds Cost $1,500

'I could have been closer, maybe, if we could have stayed in and the rain hadn't hit us.' The rain?

"On the day I qualified." Foster said, "I did 1:59.2 for two laps. That would have put me third in the front row where Gurney was. But rain fell on the north turn and they waved me off. When I got out again, after about an hour, the best I did was 1:58.426 for sixth. The waiting around didn't help."

Is there much difference between the first and second row?

"About $1,500," Foster smiled. "They pay only the six fastest qualifiers. Gurney picked up $2,200. I got $700."

At Indy, W. Foster also acquired experience. He learned to tape sponge rubber around his knees ("they were black and blue") to protect them against buffeting. He learned to drive with gloves ("a pair lasts three races") as protection against

"One day in practice I forgot them. When I came in Harlan Fengler—he's the No. 1 USAC (U.S. Auto Club) man—said, 'Next time you do that it will cost you $50'."

Pit Stop That Lasted Three Days . . . Foster learned that driving at Indy is not like motoring at Western Speedway or other Pacific Northwest bridle paths. "I thought Indy would be easier. No wheel-to-wheel stuff and those long straightaways. But at those speeds the margin for error is really small.

"You allow for the wind on a turn and the next time around there's no wind and you have to adjust. Or you're following a car at 180 and you ease a little into a turn because that's what you expect him to do. But you get caught in his vacuum and you have to get out of there.

Pit stops were discussed ("Jimmy Clark's crew was fan-tastically fast") and Foster was asked how long his took. "I don't know," he said. "It felt like three days."
Had his philosophy of driving changed? He used to say that in a race he "walked the line" of danger but never crossed it. 'No," Foster said. "The ragged edge is there and you don't I tried to go too fast at Milwaukee and hit the should have been satisfied to make the race but I was trying to get a few more seconds and poof!'

Winner Wasn't Arnold Chestnut Jr.

USAC paydays have not been overripe so far for Foster. He went out after 12 laps at Phoenix; placed fifth at Trenton; was 17th at Indy, and drew a doughnut at Milwaukee. There are 14 more USAC races to go, including the next ("for at least $15,000") Sunday at Langhorne, Pa.

En route he plans to confer with Ford Motor people at Dear-Ford has poured $24 million into racing and seeks a car driver. W. Foster drives a Falcon for pleasure, so stock car driver. naturally he wouldn't mind guiding a Ford stocker for pleasure,

To keep him in hamburgers and sweat socks there are encillary benefits. A spark plug firm requested he represent them in the U.S. for 12,000 bananas a year, plus expenses. Because of his family he said no, politely, suggested they consider a similar deal in Canada. They are.

Now it was time to stop off at Hampton School where the small fry were engaged in a sports day.

There was a race in which seven-year-olds had to push an empty can some 50 yards with a stick. While others struggled, a blonde, crew-cut tad broke alertly, gave the can the business, made no pit stops and broke the checkered flag. Name of BRANDON (CP)-Brandon Wheat Kings of Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League have named Eddie Dorohoy, 36, manager-coach for the 1965-66 season.

Dorohoy, who was playing coach for Spokane Jets of the Western International League last season, replaces Sugar Jim Henry as manager and Glen Lawson as coach. The two posts were combined for economic reasons.

Dorohoy was one of the youngest coaches in WHL history when he piloted Victoria Cougars in 1952-53 at the age of 22.

For much of the 139-mile run to Courtenay station, the route lies west of the Island Highway. It's very beautiful in there, this time of year. The prevailing color is June's lush green — dark-green of woods; emerald where cattle stand udder-deep in pastures that might well be a thousand miles from any sea. In clumps and patches up hill and down is the golden broom.

Conductor Jack Stone, better than 40 years of railroading behind him, collected two more tickets, then paused to pass the time of day. He has een with the E & N for very many years; he speaks of the ine's vanished steam locomotives as if they had been retired, not in 1950, but only

6-FOOT FENCE ENOUGH FOR MENTAL PATIENTS

Victoria city council public works committee today rejected a nursing home operator's bid for a seven-foot fence to keep mental patients from climbing out of his property.

Neil E. de Macedo asked permission to build a fence a foot higher than normally permitted in Victoria to screen the ambulance loading area at Aberdeen Private Hospital on Hill-

It was explained that nearby residents should be spared the sight of disturbed patients being taken away, and that the fence ought to be high enough to discourage escapes.

"No, I don't think the United Nations is dying," said University of Victoria political scientist, Dr. E. S. Efrat. The situation with the United Nations is extremely critical," said Professor C. S. Burchill, Dean of Arts at Royal Roads Canadian Services College.

"It still remains as the main meeting grounds for the settlement of international disputes. "I don't think it will become a centre for world governnent because the emerging nations are at present all too carried away with the first flush of independence and that is something they would not want to relinquish," said Dr.

Prof. Burchill said: "Not only can the UN not pay its bills at the present time, but future financial arrangements are also doubtful. "The composition of the UN seems to be on the point of disintegration. "The withdrawal of Indonesia and the failure of a considerable number of smaller nations to pay insignificant sums for membership is aiding this process.

"Many of the undeveloped nations feel continued membership is not worthwhile," said Prof. Burehill.

Dr. Hartley Sargent said: "The need for the United Nations is demonstrated by the present situation.

Some of these trays are decorated with entirely hand-painted Halda Indian motifs—vibrant in color and design. (A legend inscribed on the back of the tray explains the story of the design.) Also on the back is a built-in picture hook to hang the tray on a wall as a plaque.

(I've known some people who will hang the tray in a room and then use it as a color base for decorating.)

Large size for this—16 inches—is selling for $8.95. Smaller size, 14 inches, is $6.95.

These are also available with a hand-painted dogwood design. If you wish, buy them without anything but the pure, natural beauty of the wood itself. These range in price from $4.35 to $6.95.

One of the beauties of the trays is that no two are alike. If you're interested in getting one for a wedding present or a gift for someone out-of-town, give Penny a call at 382-3131.

SEVEN BAPTIZED

Ganges United Church on Salt Spring Island was the setting when Dr. Norah Hughes baptized seven little girls at a Sunday morning service. Five of the children are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Mouat of Sunset Drive. Their names are Brenda Carolyn, Barbara June, Susan Torret Louise, Karen Ann and Kathleen Diane. Also christened were Barbara Lea Ellen, tiny daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Brackett of Ganges, and Stacey Bernardine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Arnell of Rainbow Road. All the small principals were born on the island.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

Don Messer fans will be able to see the Nova Scotia record and television star in person this summer

Most radio and television stars take a holiday during the summer months, but Don Messer takes his cast on the road for special performances will get their chance to meet, besides Don, all regular members of the show including the Buchta Dancers, Marg Osborne and Charlie Chamberlain.

Right after the group finishes the 1964-65 season this month, they'll embark on a 26-day tour of major centres in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia.

The only regular member absent will be emcee Don Tremaine who has to miss the trip Stephen

The group will play Victoria on Thursday, July 15. Another well-known TV personality is in the Pacific Northwest, Jack La Lanne.

The physical culture specialist is working his show out of Seattle's Channel 4 studios all this week. It's hard to believe but La Lanne, a real health fadist, is the holder of five world strength and endurance records. He has gained widespread recog physically-demanding feats.

Among some of his official endurance records are swimming from Alcatraz to Fisherman's Wharf wearing handcuffs; swimming the treacherous Golden Gate channel, towing a 2,500-pound cabin cruiser; 1,033 push-ups in 23 minutes for the TV show "You Asked for It," and completing 1,000 push-ups and 1,000 chin-ups in one hour, 22 minutes.

Since La Lanne is 50 years old, there's hope for the rest of us yet.

Channel 12 will debut the fine CBS-TV series "Zoo-rama" on Sunday, June 20, from 5:00 to 5:30 p.m. The series has won a number of distinguished awards. Its production staff has developed new techniques that present animals in a manner never before possible.

A huge mobile strato-tower and the finest microscopic lens transport viewers across moats, over walls and through bars to observe animals.

The program has a good following on Channel 7, so it should catch a good audience on the more accessible

Who woulds thunk it? Bud Collyer, host of CBS-TV's To Tell the Truth, was "Superman" on radio for 14

This English vicarage farce with its absurd galloping clergy, inevitable comic maid and sozzled spinster, is moved along so fast and with so Cash much vitality by director Bert Farr that two nearly full houses have scarcely laughs. As a matter of fact, the gag lines are trite and obvious, the situation developments predictable and the characters

NEW YORK - Although gangster Sam Glancana was NEW YORK — Although gangster Sam Glancana was quoted as making angry remarks after Phyllis McGuire "talked her head off" to the Chicago investigators into hood-lum activity, one of his close friends in the Mafia still predicts: "There's going to be a marriage." Of course, if Phyllis became Mrs. Glancana it might be not only the culmination of a great love but a smart legal move. As his wife, she would not be required to testify to anything detrimental to Sam in any future probe — or trial, if there should be one . . . Vie Lowndes of the Playboy Clubs, currently in London trying to open a branch there, has become acquainted with Christine Keeler and they're a constant duo around Mayfair. She seems even more interested in him than she was in Albert Finney, so perhaps she'll become a Playboy "bunny" yet.

The brass are investigating the nightlife activities of the Yankee ballplayers who are inclined to stay up late in the local cafes, often swinging with cute chicks. What they can do about it is something else again—maybe not much, or nothing—but they're getting the goods on them, anyway. A grown halibut may equal the total weight of six 12-year-old girls, plus one of their small sisters. However, this giant is rare, for few halibuts live long enough to reach their full size. In fact, these valuable food fish are not as plentiful as they were 30 years ago.

The halibut is a flatfish, and flatfish make us think of flatymeated flounder. When this tender morsel arrives at the table he is just about big enough to fit comfortably on a dinner plate, leaving room for a scoop of potatoes and a helping of green peas. We buy our halibut in filets, or slices, because even a modest-sized fellow is three feet long. The biggest halibut would need a platter 10 feet long and four feet wide.

This giant halibut lived perhaps 40 years in the cool waters of the northern Atlantic Ocean. He may tip the scales at 700 pounds, which equals the weight of three tall, fat men. He gained of the tall, fat men. # Tigers Protest Working Conditions!

At a recent meeting of the directors of Tigers International, Sales Executive At a recent meeting of the directors of Tigers International, Sales Executive Branch, a resolution was passed protesting excessive work load and lack of fringe benefits. The President pointed out that where tigers were once a relatively leisured class, they now faced a round-the-clock schedule in promoting such diverse products as breakfust foods, gasoline, automobiles and detergents. Many tigers were suffering from stress and exhaustion. It was noted that many humans had discovered "Black Label Beer" to be a pleasant and refreshing beverage which was particularly acceptable after a hard day's work. A committee was set up to investigate the possibility of including an issue of "Black Label Beer" as part of any future working contract.

After defending legislation affecting Canadian newspapers and periodicals, a bill to prohibit foreign investors buying Canadian banks and his 10-percent personal income tax cut, lecture against Social Credit netary theory.

The House used its 7%-hour approved last week-to five second reading, approval in prin-ciple, to the 10-year revision of the chartered and Quebec Savings Bank acts.

It also started discussion of the resolutions contained in Mr. Gordon's April 26 budget. The budget address won a vote of confidence several weeks ago, but now each separate tax change must go before the

The Bank Act bills were referred to the standing commit tee on finance, trade and eco nomic affairs. Because the com mittee is not expected to report for some time, a bill to extend bank charters to the end of this year from their expiry date this July 1 was passed. NO ALTERNATIVE

Mr. Gordon said the Com-mons must accept his muchcriticized proposals for maintaining Canadian ownership of newspapers or forget about any action. No suitable alternative had been found, he said.

"In practical terms, we have e alternative of proceeding with the measure which is be fore the House or of dropping the question altogether. If we were to do the latter and one or more of our more important newspapers or chains of newspapers were to fall into foreign nands, neither the government nor Parliament could shirk re-sponsibility for having allowed this to happen."

The proposal would disallow as a usiness expense money spent on advertising in any newspaper or periodical owned by a non-resident. The finance minister rejected criticisms that the proposal in-fringes on press freedom.

The "complete freedom" of sinesses to advertise in existing publications or any future publications owned by Canadians was not affected.

Mr. Gordon defended his choice of implementing a tax cut as the one fairest to the Critics who preferred a cut in corporation taxes had not spelled out a satisfactory pro-cedure, Mr. Gordon said, and corporation profits were at an * all-time high. He said the government did not want to alter corporation taxes before the Carter royal commission on taxation reports.

The finance minister revealed to the Commons that New York banking interests were forewarned of the government's op-position before they bought the Mercantile Bank of Canada, and for this reason did not qualify for special privileges. WERE WARNED

Mr. Gordon said he told of the First National City Bank of New York, in July, 1963, that the government planned legislation to deal with foreign ownership of banks.

The First National bought Mercantile "with their eyes" open," he said, because it had sen advised not to proceed with the purchase until the Bank Act revisions were approved.

Responding to recent invitations from Social Credit and Creditiste MPs to comment on their monetary theories, the finance minister said if put into practice the theories would cause inflation, raise prices, cause a balance of payments problem and turn capital investment away from Canada.

Social Credit Leader Thompson said he could not understand why the finance minister has moved to prohibit provinces buying shares in chartered CHICAGO - A posse of irate mothers, determined dog-catchers and city building inspectors prowled a south side neighborhood today for a pack of half-wild cats that has run amok.

The dog-catchers were a bit out of their league, but the eary-eyed mothers weren't. They have been locked in a twomonth battle against the nasty cats, complete with night

"I'm 38, I look 45 and I feel 60," said Mrs. Ruth Hlavaty, a leader of the posse. "Those cats are smart."

Mrs. Hlavaty said she and 50 other mothers in the area mailed a petition to the city fathers two months ago, asking for a crackdown on the cats. Until last Wednesday, the mothers had nothing to show for their petition except a telephone call from a sympathetic city employee

Then two-year-old Richard Dickover was bitten by one of the cats. He is now undergoing a series of 14 shots required to make him immune to rables.

The mothers decided it was time to stop pussyfooting around. The mothers took action and formed a pussycat posse. Their husbands stayed up and babysat.

Take the scenic route? Not in an ordinary little car. Not unless you have all the instincts of a pioneer and the nerve of Buck Rogers. Many small cars just aren't built to take bumps. Notable Exception: Epic, the Tough Little Car from General Motors! The 1965 Epic travels rough winding country roads almost as smoothly as it travels highways, thanks to an unconventional and versatile suspension system. Epic's independent front suspension with transverse leaf springs absorbs road shocks at each winsel independently. So a bump under one wheelishitrosadhing.

And what do we mean by versatile? Simply this. Most small care familito pitch and yaw with drastic changes in readland speed, especially when cornering.

Victoria city council public works committee today reected a nursing home operator's bid for a seven-foot fence to keep mental patients from climbing out of his property.

Neil E. de Macedo asked permission to build a fence a foot higher than normally permitted in Victoria to screen the ambulance loading area at Aberdeen Private Hospital on Hill-

It was explained that nearby residents should be spared the sight of disturbed patients being taken away, and that the fence ought to be high enough to discourage escapes.

The committee felt a six-foot fence would accomplish the latter without being objectionably high.

Unity Through Friendship

for forthright action by Canadians to encourage national unity, Governor-General Vanier very significantly referred to one way in which this goal might be brought

This is a means to better eastwest understanding in this country which The Victoria Daily Times has urged on several occasions. Some countries encourage visits by persons from abroad, either through subsidies or in other ways, with a view to informing foreigners about the culture, products, education, entertainments and other pursuits of their hosts. Above all, it is sought to have foreign observers make acquaintance with the people of the country, see their good points and generate a friendly relationship with them.

This is exactly what Canada, on an intra-mural basis, needs today. So in widespread parts of this country.

IN HIS RECENT MOVING PLEA much of the conflict between French and English Canada, between the Maritimes and central areas, between the Pacific coast province and its highly industrialized eastern sister provinces, between prairie farmland and the factory districts of Ontario, between urban and rural folk-so many of the frictions that hamper our nation are caused by misunderstandings arising from ignorance of each other.

Mass exchanges between the provinces would be a powerful antidote to ignorance and misunderstanding. There are many ways in which these might be arrangedalready tentative steps are being taken in this direction through student exchanges, official tours and similar intercommunciation. But it must be done on a much larger

It would be money well spent if all levels of government co-operated with private interests to promote an active program of inter-provincial travel-a "get to know Canada and Canadians" plan that would remove many of the barriers between people

If it remains only a three-nation arrangement, it becomes little better than a fence around three sides of a four-sided area. Russia is not bound by its terms and can make serious inroads into fisheries which North Americans consider their own

The point is made that the Russians are not fishing for salmon, the main haul of Canadians and Americans in these waters. But there is nothing to stop the Soviet fishermen from taking this species if they wish, provided they stay out-

The Japanese are in a position to press their claim that conservation is not observed when the gate is unrestricted fishing by non-signatories of the pact. Up to the present the importance of persuading Japan to honor the abstention principle has rested on a practical consideration. No major invasion of foreign fishermen other than Japanese has threatened the area the North Americans seek to protect. That practical consideration disappears when relative newcomers arrive.

This year it is the Russians, presumably dragging for bottom fish, but in a position to harvest salmon if they so decide. Next year it might be one of the major South American fishing nations. In time to come it might be the Red Chinese.

This is bad news to Canadian and American fishermen, but it appears to be a fact of life.

If the situation stresses one point, it seems to be that fishermen of all nations must combine to foster conservation. All of them suffer if lack of restriction destroys the the abstention principle applied to stocks on which fishermen depend.

The Financial Wringer

R EPORTS FROM LONDON INdicate that the reduction of the British bank rate last week from the crisis peak of seven per cent to six per cent, along with a general tightening of domestic credit, has halted the run on sterling for the time being.

The foreign exchange market has, apparently, accepted the view that the British government will go to any length-even to risking serious unemployment difficulties - to protect the pound from devaluation.

But the financial difficulties of Britain are not over, and will not be until the balance of trade deficit is clearly diminishing so that the country can earn enough foreign International Monetary Fund.

These loans - $1 billion due in December of 1967 and $1.4 billion due in May of 1970-present 'obvious difficulties for a country which last year had a trade deficit of over $750 millions and this year expects to end up at least $250 millions in the red.

As Mr. Callaghan, chancellor of the exchequer, admitted in the Commons, the stark fact of these outstanding loans commits the British treasury to periodic "consultations" with the IMF. The international bankers, in other words, are going to be keeping a close watch on the British economy and will be in a position to "advise" the British government on how more money can be wrung exchange in the next few years to out of the country to pay the debts, repay the huge loans made by the no matter how unpalatable politically the wringing-out may be.

The Viet Cong, Too, Are Mortal

THE central difficulty for the South Vietnamese as they face perhaps the ost crucial months of the savage war their country, is that the Viet Cong have started an all-out summer cam paign with the initiative firmly on their side. A well-armed, weli-trained guerrilla force of 150,000 men has carefully studied and selected its objectives and can now we into the assault in its own time. The South Vietnamese and the Americans cannot be sure when or where the Viet Cong will strike because of a serious lack 'intelligence." They can only react on a moment-to-moment basis as the Viet

Cong call the tune.

The biggest Viet Cong build-up has been in the North and Central Provinces. The country is ideal for guerrilla operations. It is mountainous and densely forested — thousands of men can move about under a jungle umbrella impervious to air reconnaissance. It stretches from the Laotian and Cambodian borders almost to the sea. Here the Viet Cong lines of communications with North Viet Nam are shortest; and the government lifelines at their most tenuc

Control Countryside

The Viet Cong now control most of countryside and so far they have made full use of their mobility in a series of highly successful ambushes round South Vietnamese military enclaves and on the highways. The South Vicinamese regular forces have been quite unable to cope with guerrilla ambush techniques. They have lost hundreds of men in the last two weeks and have been saved from total disaster only by American air strikes. Not unnaturally the South Vietnamese troops in the central highlands - seldom venture outside their strongpoints at all. And this is no way to win a guerrilla

At best the South Vietnamese, with American support, may hang on to the enclaves they now hold. But by now the Viet Cong are thought to be ready to move into another phase of the war and try to overrun military fortresses and ns. No one can tell if they will ceed until they make the attempt. Yet for South Vietnamese there are reasons for optimism as well as pessimism.

Past Viet Cong. efforts against pre-pared positions have failed. In February the Viet Cong, who were then in control of a thick strip of the central highlands, failed to take a government special forces camp at Kanak, though their attack was well prepared. American and Vietnamese officers and a force of 'montagnards'' - dark-skinned tribal irregulars recruited in the region fought off the Viet Cong and inflicted Congratulations, Brother It has been brought to my notice through your Daily Times that Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Wharf have been celebrating their 50th anniversary of their wedding at Victoria. As it happens I am his brother, in London, and I have not seen him for over 54 years.

Not having seen my brother for such a long time, I would thank you if you would convey to Mr. and Mrs. Wharf and family congratulations on his Golden Wedding. We saw his sons during the war. They stayed with us when terrible bombing was on in London. They were in the Canadian Air Force.

Shipyards and Pay

I have read with considerable surprise that our local shipyards are concerned because the Federal Government may asking for bids for ship construction on a national scale. Apparently local shipyard labor is paid higher here than on the Atlantic coast, which is of course all to the good. This should indicate that local labor and efficiency are able to produce more or better work per man hour than the others, possibly both If that is not the case then it would appear that the local yards have priced themselves out of the market. "Overtaxed Taxpayer."

heavy casualties. Later 200 Viet Cong were found buried in a makeshift grave; others festooned the camp's barbed wire defences. This set-back, and there have been one or two others like it, may give the Viet Cong pause. What it is equally likely to do is to convince them that they must attack only in overwhelming strength when the clouds of the present rainy season make American air strikes hazardous.

Prospective Objective

The communications and control base at Pleiku is thought to be one of the Viet Cong's major objectives this sum-mer. It has just been reinforced by South Vietnamese troops. But its exposed situation is alarming, as I have seen. Pleiku lies in a plain cupped in jungle-covered hills. Communications centre, airstrip, barracks and headquarters are dispersed in a straggling compound. Its road link with the outside world is vulnerable, winding Highway 19, that runs eastwards through the hills to the sea. It has been cut by the Viet Cong on innumerable occasions and could be cut again at any time, as officers at Pleiku admit. A few mortar bombs on the metal airstrip could prevent aircraft landing or leaving; a Viet Cong attack in February put it out of action for two weeks.

When I was there American C123 transports were still flying in but low cloud was seriously hampering propeller driven aircraft (jets cannot use Pleiku airfield in any case) in support missions

to the surrounding countryside.

In the last 10 days Viet Cong have come intensely active in the Pleiku area. South Vietnamese have been badly mauled in ambushes they seem to be unable to avoid. Patrols and air strikes into the jungle may have done something to keep the Viet Cong on the move and disrupt their preparations, but no one knows what effect they have. Meanwhile the garrison of Pleiku waits for the Viet Cong to attack in their own good time. The hope is that when they come ground fire-power will inflict such losses that the Viet Cong will abandon thoughts of seizing any more strongpoints and towns. But this is a depressingly nega-

Not Mountain Fighters

One government disadvantage is that take easily to mountain and jungle warfare. I was told that it takes from two to three years to accustom them to the hardly surprising when it often so dense that the average rate of movement through it, for regular troops, is a mere three-quarters of a mile an hour. Another is that the Viet-Cong battalions are now disciplined troops. They have been completely re-equipped with Soviet and Chinese arms and have quantities of heavy mortars, recoilless rifles and anti-tank weapons, quite apart from anything they have captured from the South Vietnamese. Their communications are good and they have an elaborate signals system.

Recently Viet Cong tactics seem to-have been aimed at seeking out and killing as many South Vietnamese as possible in an effort to demoralise the rest,

A feature of the Vietnamese war is the willingness of the army to keep plodding into battle. Even if some Vietnamese officers - but certainly not all - are unimaginative and infuriate their American advisers by ignoring are a brave bunch. They have been heartened by the increasing American support, and have been saved, time and again, by swift and massive airlifts of troops in American helicopters. The arrival of U.S. marines and paratroopers to guard bases like Danang and Bien Hoa has released much needed South Vietnamese troops for combat. The time now seems to be near when American troops will be committed into Vietnamese and Americans are tually dependent. The Vietnames army could hardly operate without American air support; but the Americans would find it extremely difficult to conduct the war on their own if Vietnamese army morale cracked. If, however, the Vietnamese can hold on to what they have, and in defending it inflict really heavy casualties on the Viet Cong, it may turn out, as some believe in Salgon, that Viet Cong morale is as vulnerable as anyone else's.

Mr. Bennett's Kingdom The Albertan (Calgary) MR. PAUL GERIN-LAJOIE, Quebec's

IVI education minister, had bette move over to make room on his provin treaty rights platform for Premie A. C. Bennett of British Colu Indeed, we are not sure that Mr. Gerin-Lajoie should not take a back seat. He simply argues that a province has the constitutional right to make agreements with foreign countries on matters coming within provincial jurisdiction under the BNA Act. But Mr. Bennett, fresh from an exhilarating two weeks in Japan, claims for the provinces the right to make trade treaties with foreign coun-And trade is a federal responsibility.

True, Mr. Bennett does not contend that a province can negotiate treaties on all aspects of trade. He merely says that since natural resources come under provincial jurisdiction, only the provincial governments have the right to bargain with foreign countries on trade matters concerning natural resources. But that is quite enough to put Mr. Gerin-Lajoie to shame. For most of Canada's exports are either natural resources in their raw state or are derived from natural resources.

It may be, of course, that we are interpreting Mr. Bennett too broadly. He is not the man to make a precise statement when an ambiguous one will do Hence, if he were pinned down he might admit that he was simply claiming an exclusive provincial right to negotiate regarding the sale to or exploitation by foreign countries of such resources as water power or unprocessed minerals. Even so, he is claiming a good deal more than he is entitled to claim, and more than Ottawa can concede without abdi-cating one of the most important of its own constitutional responsibilities.

To be sure, there is no reason why a provincial government should not ne-gotiate with a foreign country, or with foreign industrial concerns, to obtain the best deal it can for the disposition of a natural resource. But any such arrange-ment it makes must be in conformity with national policy, as laid down by the federal government. Would Mr. Bennett argue, for instance, that Ontario should have the right to sell uranium from Elliot Lake for use in making nuclear weapons, in defiance of the recently promulgated federal restriction?

In giving Ottawa jurisdiction over foreign trade, the BNA Act is only hewing to common sense—for no nation can have 10 different trading policies. Where federal trade policy affects the disposi-tion of provincial natural resources, conflict should be-and usually can beavoided through the exercise of what Prime Minister Pearson calls co-operapared to co-operate, or is he too interested in establishing his own private king-dom west of the Rockies?

The Insecticide War

AS THE first scattered reports come in from the western front in the war between ecology and insecticides, the news is inconclusive, but not good. The conflict arose out of the publi-cation, by the late Rachel Carson, of the book Silent Spring, in which she documented the hazards to hu-man health and bird and animal life by in-discriminate use of mode r n insecticides.

The token concession to the Carson and other indictments which the industry launched last year, seems to have netered out.

It was a crusade to get the public to read the labels on the poisons they were using. This year the labels are still as near-unreadable as ever and the familiar missing from almost all the insecticides In Calgary, a little girl lost her life from the poison, arsenic, is a weed-killer her father was using. It was not labelled "poison." Dr. Irial Grogan, medical poison." Dr. Irial Grogan, medical perintendent of Holy Cross Hospital in Calgary recently reported the death of the child. He did so in a speech to the Alberta Coroners' convention when he argued for bigger and better inquests to alert the public to poison dangers.

Dr. Kenneth Thornton, a Medicine Hat thologist, said that toxicological services in Alberta were so bad that the chances of a poisoner getting away with rder were "staggeringly good. sonous weed killer is still on s murder were Alberta because, as the chief coroner pointed out, it was packed outside Alberta and labelling is a federal responsibility.

In addition to poisonous weed killers, almost all the potentially poisonous chlorinated hydro-carbons still are being sold without poison labels. One insecticide from British Columbia, which aldrin, is labelled poison. On several others, packaged by the same company,

Most of the labels contain warnings against implied health hazards from the use of insecticides. But these are "shouted" in agate type no larger than the fine print used for the directions. Some of the insecticides recommended for use of livestock contain warnings against using within 30 days of marketing the animal

In British Columbia, two large cattle feeding stations were ordered to stop marketing meat and milk because of the dangerous level of pesticides in the flesh of the animals. They were being fed on potatoes which had been sprayed with dieldrin. Because of the proven long term damage which this chemical can do to the liver and kidneys, dieldrin has been banned completely in Manitoba. But it is still being sold and recommended for agricultural use in Saskatchewan and

Mr. Carmichael's attitude was typical of that of most agriculturalists and

End of Illusion

Until recently, it was widely assumed that there was little danger in weed killers. The death of the Calgary child has abruptly put an end to that illusion. The use of arsenicals is not confined weed killers, however. One preparation for killing slugs in lawns contains lethal quantities of arsenic. As with insecticides, the grass and weed killers are becoming easingly potent as new formulations come on the market.

Professor R. S. Miller of the biology department of the University of Saskatchewan recently said biologists who know the hazards of insecticides are finding it difficult to combat the influence of the chemical industry. He accused it of

In Edmonton and Winnipeg, unhappily, the anti-mosquito campaigners are still fogging up the countryside with D-D-T

In the Okanagan Valley, some scientists are beginning to wonder whether it is not about time to start over from the beginning. Since the use of D-D-T was started after the war, no less than seven separate insecticides have been used and discarded by the pear growers of the valley. New resistant strains of bugs have been developing almost as quickly as insecticides, and for the bugs there is no end in sight.

But for the birds, the end is already in sight in Calgary at least. The hundreds of swallows, which once convoyed the early morning traffic along Twelfth Avenue never came back this year. The killdeer are all gone from our pasture, the meadow larks and flickers are exceedingly scarce and the robins reduced to a corporal's guard. Only the sparrows are to be heard in Central

B.C. Has Gift Answer

What I suggested was a new tray I found, made with a decidedly B.C. flavor because it's produced in a little place just outside of Vancouver. Fashioned entirely of western cedar, the workmanship is exquisite—the wood is sectioned in wedge shapes and fitted together so well, it's impossible to tell there is a joint.

Some of these trays are decorated with entirely hand-painted Haida Indian motifs — vibrant in color and design. (A legend inscribed on the back of the tray explains the story of the design.) Also on the back is a built-in picture hook to hang the tray on a wall as a plaque.

(I've known some people who will hang the tray in a room and then use it as a color base for decorating.)

Large size for this-16 inches-is selling for $8.95. Smaller size, 14 inches, is $6.95.

These are also available with a hand-painted dogwood design.

If you wish, buy them without anything but the pure, natural beauty of the wood-itself. These range in price from $4.95 One of the beauties of the trays is that no two are alike. If you're interested in getting one for a wedding present gift for someone out-of-town, give Penny a call at 382-3131.

An authoritative source close to Prime Minister Wilson said that in general the editorial reaction in Britain indicates the award to the Beatles was warmly received, though some newspapers said they were baffled and others were slightly mocking. The source said the Beatles have earned considerable dollars for Britain and there is "also a case for arguing they

Tigers Protest Working Conditions!

At a recent meeting of the directors of Tigers International, Sales Executive Branch, a resolution was passed protesting excessive work load and lack of fringe benefits. The President pointed out that where tigers were once a relatively leisured class, they now faced a round-the-clock schedule in promoting such diverse products as breakfast foods, gasoline, automobiles and detergents.

Many tigers were suffering from stress and exhaustion. It was noted that many humans had discovered "Black Label Beer" to be a pleasant and refreshing beverage which was particularly acceptable after a hard day's work. A committee was set up to investigate the possibility of including an issue of "Black habet Boot" at part of any interesting entirects.

Nine out of ten working tigers prefer BLACK LABEL BEER!
